

TRAIN OF FREEDOM

Premier Screening (one night only)

July 8, 2008

Train of Freedom is a feature documentary shot entirely on the railway system of Kosova. Since 1874, the train has traveled amazing journeys. At its peak, it transported passengers in luxury cabins from as far as Athens to Zagreb becoming a major component for travel and trade. During the war in Kosovs, dark times made their mark when nearly one million Albanians were driven away by Serbian forces who ran a campaign of ethnic cleansing, many of which were forced into packed train cars and taken to the border with Macedonia. Today, the train aims to reconcile and integrate the different ethnic groups that were affected by the war. It is one of the very few places in Kosova where Albanians, Serbs, Romas and Ashkalis share a common place. Meet the people, hear their stories and learn firsthand the hopes and challenges of this new nation.

Directed by Karina Correa.

Produced by Petrit Pula.
